The Hanging Chain

A thin four-foot long chain is suspended by its ends and is nailed to a wall. Both nails are level with one another and parallel to the floor. Because of gravity, the middle part of the chain hangs down towards the floor. If the vertical length of the chain is two feet, what is the distance between the two chains?

SOLUTION TO THE RIDDLE:

The riddle is nothing more than a simple math problem. If the chain is four feet long and it is hanging vertically a distance of two feet, it must be hanging perfectly straight, meaning that the distance between the two nails is zero. Realistically, all this means is that both nails are going through both ends of the chain.
