Five Hats In A Box

There is a box in front of you with three black hats and two white hats inside. Three perfectly intelligent men, Alan, Bob, and Cal, who each know the contents of the box, are blindfolded and asked to reach into the box, take a hat, and place it on their heads. They do not know which color hat they have taken and cannot see the hats on their own heads. You then place the three men in a single file line in such a way that after you remove their blindfolds Alan can see Bob and Cal's hat, and Cal cannot see anyone's hat. The men are required to face forward and are not allowed to turn around. You ask Alan if he knows the color of the hat he is wearing and he replies "no." You then ask Bob if he knows the color of the hat he is wearing and he answers, "actually I do" What color of hat was Cal wearing and how did he figure this out?"

Five Hats in a Box

SOLUTION TO THE RIDDLE:

The only configuration that would allow for this situation is if Bob and Cal are both wearing blacks. If Alan were to see two white hats in front of him, he would be able to deduce that he is wearing a black hat because there are only two white hats in the box. In all other instances he must respond with a “no”. If Bob were to see a white hat in front of him he would be able to deduce that he is wearing a black hat because he would know that both him and Cal couldn't be wearing white hats otherwise Alan would have known the color of his hat. Because of all this, Alan and Bob do not know the color of their hats and Cal can be sure about the color of his own hat, which is black.
